

Plumstead Prepares its Seniors for College Admissions Process

Plumstead Christian School held its first interviewing/college essay writing seminar for current seniors on November 2. Head of School Pat Fitzpatrick provided tips for interviewing, and Mr. Fitzpatrick and math teacher Kevin Johnson provided an insightful mock interview that the students were able to critique. Following this, volunteer parents and friends of Plumstead interviewed the students and critiqued their college essays - providing the seniors with feedback from professionals was invaluable for preparing our students for college. More and more, colleges are emphasizing these two elements of the college admissions process in order to capture a better picture of applicants.

Plumstead would like to extend a special thank you to Susan Hawthorne for helping with the organization of this event, as well as to all of the volunteers for giving of their time and expertise. Volunteers included the following: Kay Weeder (attorney and PCS parent), Ann Toll (attorney, PCS parent, and member of PCS Educational Policy Committee), Lane Sattler (Director/Worldwide Quality Control for Cephalon and PCS parent), Greg Czura (attorney and sponsor of our Mock Trial Team), Don Dressler (PCS registrar and guidance counselor), Mark Miquel (Director of Finance and Student Services), and Melody Nichols (retired elementary principal, adjunct professor at Philadelphia Biblical University, and member of PCS Educational Policy Committee).
